TO WHOM IT MAY CONCERN

NSW Police Legacy is a not-for-profit organisation which supports the families of deceased NSW Police Officers. Now in its 23rd year of operation, the charity provides emotional and financial support to over 1,300 widows, widowers and children throughout NSW. Services offered include welfare grants; grief and trauma counselling; education grants and tertiary scholarships; as well as social events.

Our charity is completely supported by donations and we receive no Government funding (our Charitable Fundraising Number is CFN14691). More information about our organisation can be found on our website: www.policelegacynsw.org.au

For many years NSW Police Legacy produced the Child Safety Handbook, an awareness guide for parents and children to help prevent injuries and accidents. Local editions of the book were distributed free to primary school children throughout the State. As well as giving families vital information to assist with staying safe, the Child Safety Handbook also raised valuable funds for NSW Police Legacy's work.

In 2010, the Board of Management of NSW Police Legacy signed a publishing agreement with Associated Media Group (AMG) of Sydney to relaunch the Child Safety Handbook in New South Wales, on behalf of our charity.

This letter is to confirm that the Associated Media Group is authorised to sell advertising in editions of the Child Safety Handbook, in accordance with the guidelines of its agreement with NSW Police Legacy. This arrangement has the full endorsement of our Board of Management, who has granted AMG the exclusive rights to produce, publish and distribute the Child Safety Handbook in NSW.

I would like to encourage you to be a part of the Child Safety Handbook. Your support will benefit the bereaved families of deceased Police Officers who have served the communities of NSW, as well as providing a valuable resource to help keep the children of this State safe.
